The Financial Parent Consultant opens Financial Parent Academy

Duluth, Ga March 4, 2017 – Sheena Robinson, The Financial Parent Consultant, opened Financial Parent Academy to students on March 4 in Duluth, Ga. The academy is a nonprofit organization dedicated to teaching both children and parents financial education. Financial Parent Academy is excited to be able to help alleviate financial illiteracy in households by teaching early prevention techniques.

The organization will offer classes on the 1st Saturday of the month beginning in March for elementary and middle school students. Classes for high school students will take place on the 3rd Saturday of each month. Adult classes will be held on the 2nd and 4th Thursdays and Saturdays each month. Classes will run from March - November. Financial Parent Academy will allow both parents and children an opportunity to live the best life possible by providing the resources they need to excel in their finances.

“Financial Parent Academy is well overdue in the United States”, said Robinson. The financial illiteracy epidemic has caused many Americans to find themselves in unfavorable financial situations as an adult.”

With only seventeen states requiring students to take some type of financial course upon graduating high school, there is a great need for financial education in the household. Robinson and her team have put programs in place to make sure they not only serve students who attend the academy, but also onsite assistance programs to assist the community.

“ I am so honored to be a part of an organization that truly cares for people and wants to walk alongside them to achieve their financial goals,” said Yvette Davis, a high school teacher at the academy.
