“The Financial Parent Consultant” facilitates career planning workshop for Precious Me Inc

Lilburn, Ga September 16, 2016 – Sheena Robinson, The Financial Parent Consultant will facilitate the 1st workshop of the year for Precious Me Inc, on Saturday September 17, 2016. The workshop will help young ladies 11 – 18 years old begin preparing for their career paths. The event will be held at New Mercies Christian Church in Lilburn, Ga from 9:30am –11:30am. Robinson will help young ladies prepare a plan for their future.

Precious Me Inc, is an organization designed to teach young ladies how to love themselves, how to appreciate others, and how to recognize the love from others inside and outside of immediate ties through experiential learning experiences. The experiential learning experience offers focus on areas of education ranging from healthy development of self-identity to life skills such as preparing quality nutritional meals and building substantial resumes.

“Our program is designed with the modern girl in mind, said Founder and Executive Director, Bianca L. Singleton. The topics explored within each workshop and experience will be pertinent to ongoing and rising needs such as social media etiquette and identity development. In a world where sexting and cyber bullying are emerging troubles of today’s society, young ladies need to be equipped with the skills and knowledge to overcome 21st Century girl problems.

Robinson will help the young ladies put together dream maps where they realize who they are, what careers match up with their skill set, and what it means to follow your passion vs a profit.

“My goal is for every young lady to walk out of the workshop knowing that they can be confident in their future,” said Robinson. “I want them to know they were placed here on earth for a purpose and it is up to them to live out their purpose.”
